

BIRD SIGHTINGS

July-August 2016

Seth Kellogg, Marjorie W. Rines, and Robert H. Stymeist

The weather lowlight of the period was the continuing drought, which started to have a major impact on our water supply, vegetation, and wildlife. Most of the state was considered to be under severe drought except Cape Cod, a small portion of southeast Massachusetts, and most of the Berkshires. In July, rainfall in Boston was just .87 of an inch, nearly three inches below average, and in August, 1.72 inches of rain was recorded, 1.63 inches below normal.

It was also very hot. July had 12 days in which the temperature reached 90° with a high of 98° in Boston on July 22, although many communities west and north of Boston saw the mercury exceed 100°. It was the hottest August ever recorded in Boston. There were seven days with temperatures in the 90s with a high of 98° on August 12. A rare night-time tornado with winds of up to 100 miles an hour occurred on August 22 causing severe damage in the MetroWest area. Sections of Concord and Marlboro were especially hard hit.

WATERFOWL THOUGH ALCIDS

On July 12, a flock of eleven Black-bellied Whistling-Ducks was photographed in Sandwich. There are half a dozen earlier records of this species in the state, but the size of this flock is unprecedented. The Lesser Scaup that spent the last reporting period at Quabbin Reservoir lingered through the end of July, and the Ring-necked Duck that spent the last reporting period at Horn Pond in Woburn lingered through the entire period.

A Red-throated Loon was discovered on a pond in Hampden. A snapping turtle caught it, but the observer rescued the bird and took it to the Tufts Wildlife Clinic. The injuries, however, were so severe that the bird had to be euthanized. The Pacific Loon originally discovered in June on Nantucket met a similar fate when it was finally taken to Tufts on July 7.

As usual, the Brookline Bird Club's pelagic trip on August 20–21 was productive, highlighted by a Black-capped Petrel, five Audubon's Shearwaters, six White-faced Storm-Petrels, six Band-rumped Storm-Petrels, and six Long-tailed Jaegers.

Good numbers of shearwaters continued to be reported from Race Point in Provincetown. On August 19, a Red-billed Tropicbird was photographed south of Nantucket Island.

An unusual number of herons was reported at inland locations during this period, particularly in the Connecticut River Valley, where as many as 39 Great Egrets were seen in Longmeadow alone. Snowy Egrets and Little Blue Herons are much less likely to turn up at inland locations, but there were an exceptional number of both. A Cattle Egret in Longmeadow was an exciting inland record. It is possible that the conditions caused by the extreme drought created perfect habitat for foraging herons. During the last reporting period we were able to confirm Sandhill Cranes breeding in Worthington, and this reporting period they were confirmed at Burrage Pond Wildlife Management Area, where a pair have been reported for the past two years.

An American Avocet spent nearly three weeks at Plum Island between July and August. There was a two-week interval in which it was not spotted, but either the same bird or a second one was discovered on August 29. A Whimbrel flying over South Quabbin on August 1 was a very rare inland record. A Ruff was photographed in Newburyport Harbor on July 27.

Laughing Gull is particularly uncommon inland, but in mid-August there were reports from Turners Falls and Wachusett Reservoir. There was no overlap in the dates and both reports were of juveniles, so it is possible it was the same individual. Two Laughing Gulls were also seen in Everett, which is also inland but a straight shot up the Mystic River from the ocean, so a bit less surprising. A Franklin's Gull was photographed on Plum Island on July 8 and was enjoyed by many on the island that day, but unfortunately was not seen after this. On July 9, a sea watcher at Race Point in Provincetown spotted a tern that he questioned—was it Bridled or Sooty? He sent photos to other experts who agreed he had photographed a Bridled Tern.

In Yarmouthport an observer watched two juvenile Forster's Terns begging from a pair of adults. Photographs suggested the young probably could fly, and if they could, we cannot eliminate the possibility of breeding elsewhere, but it is very likely that they hatched locally. The only known Massachusetts breeding record was of a pair on Plum Island in 1991.

DOVES THROUGH FINCHES

On Nantucket two White-winged Doves were noted in August, the first report of this species since August 2014. The fall movement of Common Nighthawks is an event many birders anxiously await. This year numbers were down from the same period last year. Several observers mentioned that there was no hatch of flying ants, which often occurs in August. A Chuck-will's-widow was heard in Orleans on Pochet Island, a traditional location for this species in recent years. A pair of Merlins was confirmed nesting in Barre, a first breeding record for Worcester County. Another pair of Merlins was seen defending a nest at Clark's Cove on Nantucket.

A July 2 report of an Olive-sided Flycatcher in Great Barrington gave no further indication of breeding; this species has bred in Berkshire County in the past but not recently. Yellow-bellied Flycatchers are one of the last of the empids to arrive in spring and one of the first to migrate in the fall. Manomet banded one on August 30. The dry weather this period was a positive event for the breeding success of Purple Martins. Colonies in Mashpee, Rehoboth, Marshfield, Norfolk, and Plum Island had great results; nearly all eggs hatched resulting in fledged young. Another interesting breeding report was of a Blue Grosbeak nesting at Cumberland Farms. A female was seen carrying nesting material in June. This nest apparently failed, but she was found building another nest in July. The annual Tree Swallow event on Plum Island never disappoints, at least 20,000 were estimated in mid-August.

By August, birds were on the move. A total of 29 warbler species was reported during the period including three Mourning, two Hooded, and a hatch year Cerulean, which is a rare but regular migrant in North Shore coastal thickets in August. Other noteworthy August migrants included Philadelphia Vireo in Williamstown, Swainson's Thrush in Medford, and Dickcissels in Wayland and on Plum Island. A White-winged Crossbill visited a feeder in Pittsfield, and there were reports of Evening Grosbeaks from four localities in central and western Massachusetts.
