

BIRD SIGHTINGS

September/October 2014

Seth Kellogg, Marjorie W. Rines, and Robert H. Stymeist

The first six days of September averaged 88° with a high of 93° on September 2. A dramatic drop of 16° on September 7 was accompanied by a severe thunderstorm that uprooted many trees, caused power outages, and claimed the lives of two women who were struck by lightning at Crane Beach in Ipswich. Microbursts brought significant rainfall in Essex County, and the National Weather Service issued a tornado warning for Franklin County, but the Boston area escaped. Total precipitation for the month was only .07" almost three inches below normal. Summer made a comeback during the last weekend of the month with a high of 87° in Boston.

October temperatures averaged 56° degrees in Boston, two degrees above average. The high was 81° on October 15, and the low was 39° on October 20. A powerful nor'easter from October 22 through 24 caused a great deal of coastal damage with strong winds and as much as six inches of rain. Beverly Airport reported 6.13 inches, Brockton noted 5.03 inches, and Wakefield had 4.21 inches. Winds gusted to over 60 mph at Scituate.

WATERFOWL THROUGH ALCIDS

Four Pacific Loons were reported from three locations. Although this species is uncommon but regular in October, two September reports were extremely early.

The Brookline Bird Club runs pelagic trips every fall, and as usual the results were noteworthy. The highlight was an astonishing 189 Audubon's Shearwaters, a record high number. Two Band-rumped Storm-Petrels and one White-faced Storm-Petrel were reported; although one can hope for these species at this time of year, neither is expected. Three Long-tailed Jaegers were frosting on the cake.

A Leach's Storm-Petrel made a rare inland appearance on October 25 at Mystic Lakes in Medford, probably the result of the late October nor'easter. A White-tailed Tropicbird was photographed at Hydrographer Canyon on September 4. The one photographed on August 26 at Veatch Canyon may have been the same individual.

There were two reports of American White Pelican, one on October 25 in Eastham, the second on October 26 on Plum Island. The Eastham bird was observed flying north and may have been the same individual as the Plum Island bird.

September 14 was one of those days that hawk watchers dream of. Mt. Wachusett tallied 7,649 Broad-wings, and—as described by Paul Roberts—"a literally mind-numbing 39 Bald Eagles." September 13 and 15 were also impressive, with season highs from several locations. The first Rough-leg of the season was seen on Mt. Wachusett on October 31.

One or two Sandhill Cranes have been reported from Worthington since April. Once rare in Massachusetts, cranes have been breeding in New Marlboro since 2007 and possibly before. The consistency of these birds throughout the breeding season gives reason to hope they are breeding or prospecting for a future nest site.

A Ruff was photographed at the Bear Creek Sanctuary in Saugus on October 26 and lingered through October 29. There were two reports of Gull-billed Tern on Plum Island on September 2 and September 11 and may have been about the same individual.

CUCKOOS THROUGH FINCHES

October is the peak of the fall Northern Saw-whet Owl migration, but in October 2013 banders lamented the worst flight in more than 10 years. This year mild weather and three straight days of rain initially prevented the owls from moving south. Finally the three-day nor'easter cleared out, and the winds shifted to the northwest. During the last seven days of October over 175 Saw-whets were banded at sites in Northbridge and Lincoln; 60 owls were netted on October 30 alone. For the second year in a row a Long-eared Owl was found in Otis, and on October 27 the first Snowy Owl of the season was reported on Plum Island.

For the second year in a row the number of sightings of Common Nighthawks during fall migration was encouraging. Tom Gagnon reported his highest numbers in over 30 years from his site in Northampton. Good numbers continued into the first few days of September, and a straggler was noted in Grafton on October 6. A high count of 20 Whip-poor-wills was tallied from Plum Island on September 4 with two late lingerers on September 23. Hawk watchers at Mt. Wachusett recorded 151 American Kestrels, 25 Merlins, and 29 Peregrines scattered among the thousands of migrating Broad-winged Hawks.

The fall passerine movement was late getting started. The first eight days of September brought warm southwest winds, and it seemed to this observer and others that birds were just trickling through with no major fallout. It wasn't until September 19 that significant numbers were reported. At Plum Island, counts included 12 Philadelphia Vireos, 11 Black-and-white Warblers, 12 American Redstarts, and 10 Magnolia Warblers. October was a better month for migrants; a major flight of Yellow-rumped Warblers was reported from Westport on October 19 with observers estimating close to 1500 individuals. From mid-October on there was a steady movement of Purple Finches and Pine Siskins.

The sparrow migration was well underway in October. Reports included ten individual Clay-colored, seven Lark, nine Grasshopper, eight Nelson's and two Le Conte's sparrows, one in Nahant and another very cooperative one at Danehy Park in Cambridge.

This period traditionally has many surprises and unusual birds. Highlights included a Rufous Hummingbird, which visited a feeder in Brewster, where the homeowners welcomed all birders; Western Kingbirds from Winthrop and Plum Island; Sedge Wrens in Lexington and on Plum Island; a Black-throated Gray Warbler in Westport; and a Painted Bunting in Brighton. Other noteworthy news included only the second record of Bicknell's Thrush since 2000 banded at Manomet and a high count of 84 Northern Rough-winged Swallows on October 7 in Wayland.
