March/April 2015

Seth Kellogg, Marjorie W. Rines, and Robert H. Stymeist

March started with a continuation of the snows of February. On March 1 Boston received nearly four more inches of snow, the South Shore and Cape Cod got six more inches, and parts of Bristol County reported eight inches. This was a heavy snow causing multiple roof collapses throughout the region. On March 15 2.9 inches of snow fell in Boston and with that we set the record for the snowiest winter with 108.6 inches, one inch more than the previous record set in 1995-96. The deep freeze continued in March, causing many harbors to become clogged with ice. In Plymouth Harbor the ice was six to eight inches thick and even the Coast Guard cutter Pendant got stuck in Boston Harbor while breaking ice.

April had no snow and the temperature averaged 48° in Boston, which is normal for the month. The high was 69° on April 13 and the low was 30° on the first. Rainfall totaled 2.28 inches in Boston, 1.46 inches below normal. Most of this fell on Patriot's Day, which is also the day of the Boston Marathon, and was undoubtedly appreciated by the runners.

WATERFOWL THROUGH ALCIDS

A Ross's Goose was discovered at the University of Massachusetts campus in Amherst on April 1 and stayed a single day. This is the second Ross's Goose for the winter in western Massachusetts, the other having been a bird at Turners Falls in December. The only Cackling Geese reported during the period were also in western Massachusetts, all in the first two days of the month. The Tufted Duck that spent most of February on Nantucket lingered through the middle of April, and a different Tufted Duck was discovered in Lowell on March 26, moving down the Merrimack River to Salisbury by April 10. White-faced Ibis is now annual in Essex County, and this year's bird arrived unusually early on April 6.

April was an exciting time on the outer Cape, starting with the sighting of a Crested Caracara in Chatham on April 5. Sadly it was not seen again. There are only two previous sightings of Caracara in Massachusetts. The first was an individual seen by many people at the Cumberland Farm fields in Halifax in January 1999. Although this sighting was initially rejected by the Massachusetts Avian Records Committee based on questionable origin, it was reevaluated in 2008 as additional evidence became available of extralimital occurrence. The second sighting was in West Tisbury in May 2007.

The second piece of excitement was the sighting of two Swallow-tailed Kites on April 12 by two experienced hawkwatchers. If that weren't enough, the next day the same two people spotted four kites together, and there were additional sightings of singles on April 16 and 18. Although Swallow-tailed Kites have become increasingly common as spring migrants through Massachusetts, particularly on Cape Cod and the Islands, most of these sightings have been in May and early June, and a total of four kites is unprecedented.

Sandhill Cranes have been breeding in New Marlborough since 2006, but still remain uncommon in the rest of the state. Reports for the period were unusually high, including birds in Worthington that have been regular since 2013, and may be breeding in that area as well.

Black-headed Gulls are always a nice find, but are exceptionally rare inland, so the discovery of one at the Meadow Street fields in Amherst on April 6 was exciting, and enjoyed by many.

OWLS THROUGH FINCHES

Great Horned Owls were on nests and the first young were noted by the second week of April. Snowy Owls were reported from eleven locations with four individuals noted in the Saugus marshes on March 29. The dark phase Gyrfalcon that had been frequenting New Hampshire, then Maine, then New Hampshire again finally made two brief visits to Salisbury on March 4 and 18. At Lot #1 on Plum Island hawkwatchers recorded great numbers of migrating Merlin and American Kestrels.

The Black-backed Woodpecker discovered January 6 at the Forest Hills Cemetery in Jamaica Plain continued in the area, expanding to nearby Franklin Park and was last seen on April 19. Red-headed Woodpeckers were found in Fitchburg and in Sterling.

Migration was rather lackluster until some warmer weather came in from April 11 through April 15 when good numbers of Hermit Thrush and Palm, Pine, and Yellow-rumped warblers were counted. A total of 14 species of warblers were noted in April highlighted by reports of Yellow-throated Warblers in Carlisle and Arlington. A cold front came through on April 16 with cool northwesterly winds and birds seemed stalled with just light movement until a southwesterly flow on April 28 brought a mini wave of birds in the final days of the month. In Provincetown over 80 Yellow-rumped Warblers were counted and similar high counts were noted in several locations.

There was a moderate incursion of Bohemian Waxwings all around the state with the jackpot in the Gardner area with as many as 300 individuals present. Other high counts were noted in Leominster, Sheffield, Windsor, and New Salem. Common Redpolls were noted in fair numbers in March and a Hoary Redpoll was reported in Falmouth. Two Red Crossbills were banded at the Plum Island banding station on April 23.

Finally this past winter was one of the coldest and the snowiest on record and may have badly affected the population of Carolina Wrens; this species has had a history of up and down populations when there is a severe winter. In recent years they have been increasing significantly with relatively mild winters, it will be interesting to see the results of next winter's Christmas Bird Count and compare it with the all time high counts of this past CBC. I for one have already missed hearing more than a very few this spring.

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES VS. MBTA

Birding Community E-Bulletin July 2015

In June 2015, the Birding Community E-Bulletin described the announcement of intent from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to strengthen implementation of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act (MBTA) in order to address some new “incidental takes” from some oil pit, power line, communications towers, and other potential hazards. The report indicated that comments were to be due by July 27th:

<<http://refugeassociation.org/?p=12013/#proposed>>

In what seemed to be by many as a reaction to this proposal, the U.S. House of Representatives passed and sent to the Senate an appropriations bill for Commerce, Justice, Science, and Related Agencies (CJS), HR 2578, which contained a rider. This rider, presented by Congressman Duncan (R-3-SC), amendment 347, would defund enforcement of the MBTA by the Department of Justice for one year.

Bird conservationists around the country were stunned and outraged, prompting a flood of letters, calls, and e-mails to the Senate to make sure the rider would not be part of the Senate companion bill.

While the Senate struck the anti-MBTA rider from its initial consideration of the CJS appropriations bill, there is still a chance that it could reemerge. Congressman Duncan has been trying to get a similar amendment through the House Interior Appropriations bill.
